

Useful websites to help with career planning.

Have you become frustrated scrolling and scrolling through the many job search websites for hours and hours, overwhelmed by the sheer amount of choice?

You are not alone.

To help you, we have selected a few online options that you can use to assist in deciding the path that you may want to take.

Careerpilot www.careerpilot.org.uk

Career pilot is a free online platform, for students, that provides information for those looking for further education and employment beyond. It allows you to search for careers based on a sector, a subject, or your values. It offers a free quiz for finding your best suited career, but you will need to register with an email address

<https://nationalcareers.service.gov.uk>

The National Careers Service is another free-to-use platform, that provides information and guidance for anyone (13+) looking to figure out their career path. As part of this platform, you also have access to career advisors, who you can either call (8am-8pm, Monday-Friday; 10am-5pm, Saturday) or message over a webchat.

<https://careers.startprofile.com>

Start is another great platform to use for planning your career path. It provides guidance for what your next options are, as well as opportunities for finding internships and placements within your desired field. It also allows you to find programmes and organisations within said field, that will help get you closer to your goal.

Apprenticeships

www.apprenticeships.gov.uk

Find out how to become an apprentice, what apprenticeships are available, which employers offer them and information about starting your apprenticeship. Register your profile, search vacancies and apply for an apprenticeship - you must be 16 or over

www.healthcareers.nhs.uk

If you've think that you want to work within healthcare, the NHS has a website dedicated to helping not only find careers, but pathways of studying and experience as well. The NHS has 350 different types of careers, take a quiz to find out which role best suits your interests.

www.princes-trust.org.uk

The Prince's Trust is a charitable organisation set up to help young people seeking help with career planning or with their studies. It offers courses, enterprise initiatives, mentoring opportunities, and much more for 16 to 30 year olds across the UK and its website offers a wealth of information and advice readily available.

www.ucas.com

UCAS has an entire page on its website dedicated to providing information and links to online tools you can use, from starting your own business, volunteering and work experience, to apprenticeships and traineeships. As well as a starting point for researching university courses

Remember before you sign up to anything online read the privacy statement at the bottom of the webpage to see how they are going to use your data. Boring I know, but take care to protect your data you would not leave your phone lying around to be stolen.

